

Oxford Reference

Oxford Reference brings together hundreds of language and subject reference books into a single searchable resource.

Subjects in Oxford Reference:

Archaeology
Art & Architecture
Classical studies
History
Law
Linguistics
Literature
Media studies
Medicine and health
Music
Names studies
Performing arts
Philosophy
Religion
Science and technology
Social sciences
Society and culture

Plus many bilingual and English dictionaries, quotations, visual dictionary, thesaurus, timelines, subject overviews, world flags and world maps

To connect to Oxford Reference:

1. Go to <http://www.knoxlib.org>
2. Go to Explore the collection → Encyclopedias, magazines and newspapers
Oxford Reference is under the Reference books tab.

Oxford Reference tips:

1. Enter any word or combination of words in the Search Box. Capitalization does not matter.
2. Use double quotation marks to search an exact phrase: "flash mob"
3. Use the * symbol to stand in for any part of a word: dost*sk* will find Dostoevsky and Dostoievski.
4. You can limit your results to one or more subject areas by using the check boxes below the search box, "Search within my subject specializations."

To browse or search within a single subject, be sure that Subject is selected rather than Reference Type at the top of the page. Click on a subject link from the list of subjects. You can then use the search box on the left, "Search within results" or browse entries by entering a few letters in the "Starting with" box.

5. From a subject page, click the Books tab to see the reference books included in that subject. You can then select a book to browse or search within.
6. Search results can be narrowed by facets in the left column.
7. In the display of an article, related content is linked on the left.
8. The article view provides tools for printing, saving, emailing and citing the article.
9. You can create a personal account and sign in to annotate, tag and save articles.